

Ian De Haes

SIMON AND THE BIG, BAD, ANGRY BEASTS

A Book about Anger

flyaway books
Louisville, Kentucky

The first time Simon got mad,
it was after he had caused a lot of mischief.

His father had punished him, and Simon was angry with the whole world.

He was so mad that he had a big temper tantrum.

In his room, where his father had sent him,
Simon banged noisily on the door.

Suddenly he discovered that a big ram was pounding the door along with him!

It was great, it was marvelous, it was magical to have a ram that charged after anything that made Simon mad.
If Simon's father asked him for something, bam!
The animal knocked him down.

The second time Simon got really mad,
he had just lost at a game and didn't think it was fair.
Suddenly, to his absolute amazement,
he saw that his ram had transformed into an alligator.

It was great, it was marvelous, it was magical to have a not-so-nice alligator that snapped at people with his teeth when Simon wasn't happy.

